WHY DO WE WORK SO HARD?
When John Maynard Keynes mused in 1930 that, a century hence, society might be so rich that the hours worked by each person could be cut to ten or 15 a week, he was not hallucinating, just extrapolating. The combination of extra time and money gave rise to an age of mass leisure, family holidays and meals together in front of the tv.

The New Corporate Campus
The corporate office landscape has continuously evolved to meet market demands and enable companies to compete for work, real estate, and talent. Today, a new corporate real estate model, influenced by the combined history of corporate campuses and leased office space, has emerged to better meet the needs of global corporations and their changing workforce. workdesign.com

SPATIAL CULTURE: TECH FIRMS AIM TO DISPLAY COMPANY CULTURE THROUGH OFFICE DESIGN
As technology companies outline plans for their office design, creating ways to showcase their culture impacts the process. “Every company has its own unique culture and core values that make up who they are and have contributed to their success,” said Jenny Haeg, founder and CEO of San Francisco real estate firm Custom Spaces, which focuses on finding space for technology and startup companies. “Therefore, it’s crucial for a company to individualize their space to allow that unique culture to flourish and develop.” theregistrysf.com

YOUR OFFICE AIR IS KILLING YOU
Your life depends on good air. Every year, air pollution causes the premature deaths of between 5.5 million and 7 million people, making it more deadly than HIV, traffic accidents and diabetes combined. The majority of these deaths—about 4 million—are caused by indoor air pollution, primarily in developing countries. But it takes a toll in developed countries as well. In Europe, for example, air pollution shortens the average life expectancy by nearly one year. Worldwide, more than 80 percent of people living in urban areas breathe air that exceeds pollution limits advised by the World Health Organization (WHO).

BIG NUMBER
26 MILLION
Square feet of new office construction is currently taking place in New York City. The city has not seen a supply pipeline like this since the 1980s and it comes in response to inactivity over the previous 15 years, which led to pent up demand for modern workplaces. As the supply of new office space enters the lease market, landlords are looking for ways to retain current tenants.

The 48th annual NeoCon, held from June 13-15 at The Mart in Chicago, is just days away. The fair will deliver three days of innovative products, educational seminars, and networking opportunities. The single most important commercial interiors event of the year, NeoCon sets the tone for the industry, and drives it in new and mostly inspiring directions.

In addition to a powerful keynote program, including Paul Scalia, Founder/CEO of Delos, and Founder of the International WELL Building Institute® (IWBI): David Rockwell, celebrated hospitality designer and Founder and President of Rockwell Group; and Oana Stanescu, Partner of Family, the architecture studio behind buzzed-about projects including + POOL, the show’s momentum will be amplified by an array of new and engaging exhibits, events and resources.

Special features include the new Guerrilla Truck Show @ NeoCon, a satellite version of the ultra popular emerging design event typically held at Chicago’s Fulton Market. This year it will take place on Tuesday, 6/14 on the newly expanded South Drive. Inside, The Mart will feature several captivating exhibits and displays, such as the “IIDA Effect/Affect,” designed by the San Francisco-based, award-winning firm Studio O+A, a digital wall showcasing Best of NeoCon award winners, as well as places... to refresh and recharge like the BuzziLounge and Herman Miller Plaza. Galas and gatherings, awards programs and installations by design firms, associations and media partners will round out the extra-curricular offering. Of course, no edition of NeoCon would be complete without the ever-popular showroom parties (Monday, 6/13 from 5 - 7PM), as well as 7th floor exhibit hall festivities (Tuesday, 6/14 from 3 – 5PM.) In more detail, the NeoCon 2016 events calendar includes:

Special NeoCon 2016 Exhibits

ASID
Floor 1, West Pass-Thru

The American Society of Interior Designers (ASID) is pleased to welcome visitors to NeoCon 2016 as they arrive with a space located off the main lobby on the first floor. ASID is promoting a healthy NeoCon experience - physically, mentally & socially. At its booth, the association will illustrate how design impacts lives in a creative, engaging way.

BEST OF NEOCON DIGITAL WALL
Floor 1, North Corridor

Contract Magazine reprises its must-see, Best of NeoCon presentation this year, which will once again feature the most important and influential new product innovations. This competition of over 40 product categories is juried by nearly fifty architects, designers and facilities professionals from the nation’s leading firms.

BUZZILOUNGE
Floor 1, East Pass-Thru

BuzziLounge offers a place to recharge with a playful pick-me-up at NeoCon. Guests can relax with Martin Lesjak while taking the BuzziBalance for a test drive, a seating solution designed in collaboration with 13&9. BuzziJungle is an ideal area to escape the crowds and gain a bird’s-eye view of the fair in the elevated work-lounge concept by emerging designer, Jonas Van Put. It will also feature a quiet nook to catch up on emails and socialize.

HERMAN MILLER PLAZA
Floor 1, South Lobby

Whether just arriving, on the way out the door, or seeking a break from the action, Herman Miller invites attendees to pause, connect, and revive in its vibrant plaza. The space will be outfitted with a dynamic range of Herman Miller furnishings—from iconic classics reimagined in fresh materials, to brand new designs that redefine comfort in the workplace.

IDEAPAIN&THINKTANK ANYWHERE
Floor 1, North Lobby Escalator

Since 2008, IdeaPaint has been re-imagining how people collaborate through the creation of dry erase paint and accessories. This innovation continues with the NeoCon-exclusive launch of a new mobile collaboration system, designed in partnership with Primo Orpilla of Studio O+A. The new line features three pieces to help take ideation anywhere. IdeaPaint will be highlighting its magnetic PULL system, and products still “in the lab.“ It will also have a 7th floor booth at 7-3069.

IIDA EFFECT/AFFECT
Floor 1, Starbucks Escalator

Attendees are invited to experience IIDA Effect/Affect, designed by the San Francisco-based, award-winning design firm, Studio O+A. Located near Starbucks on the first floor, IIDA Effect/Affect explores how a designed space evolves as people move through it and leave their mark on the built environment.

MAYER FABRICS - THE VOLLIS SIMPSON COLLECTION
Floor 1, North Corridor

Inspired by visionary American folk artist Vollis Simpson, Mayer Fabrics’ exclusive new collection of Sunbrella® Contract captures the whimsy, joy and intricate designs of Simpson’s work. This collection brings new life to commercial spaces by using the recurring details in Simpson’s work to uncover the unexpected charm in life’s smallest moments.
The new Vollis Simpson collection and original Vollis Simpson artwork can be viewed up-close at the Mayer Fabrics showroom (1173).

MOHAWK GROUP - EXPAND YOUR BOUNDARIES
_Floor 1, Kinzie Wells Entrance_

Explore the “expand your boundaries” theme, with new inspiration, cutting-edge technology and unique product formats. Taking the perspective of an aerial photograph, Earth to Sky carpet tiles combine to evoke the rich topography of the world and its vanishing point into an endless sky. With new tile sizes and mixable patterns, unique interior landscapes and skyscapes can be created. Attendees are also encouraged to view the latest flooring solutions from Mohawk Group in its permanent showroom at The Mart (377).

MOHAWK GROUP & INSTALL - “EXPAND YOUR BOUNDARIES” with INSTALL
Floor 1, North Lobby

Mohawk Group will be activating another space that will invite show-goers to expand their horizons with new installation methods. Mohawk Group, the leader in floor covering and INSTALL, the leader in floor covering installation training and certification will demonstrate new and innovative installation techniques, including floating carpet tile installations with FlexLok tabs and loose lay LVT. There will be live installations and the opportunity to learn about the value of quality, certified installations. With new technologies and a variety of installation methods, Mohawk and INSTALL can answer any flooring challenge.

NEW TALENT SPOTLIGHT: FIVE DESIGNERS TO WATCH
Presented By Metropolis magazine In Partnership With NeoCon
Floor 1, West Pass-Thru

Metropolis debuts five new talents in a curated installation at NeoCon 2016. Each new talent will display 3 to 5 objects of design, following Metropolis’ at-all-scales approach. This group of innovators to watch can be found on The Mart’s first floor, as well as in Metropolis’ June issue. Sponsored by: Milliken and Wilsonart

New Talents:
• Stewart Hicks
• Allison Newmeyer

THE VOICE’ STAR TO PERFORM AT MUZO SHOWROOM

MCCARTHY WAS A FINALIST IN THE U.K.’S VERSION OF THE VOICE AND HAS APPEARED ON PRIME TIME TELEVISION IN FRONT OF AN AUDIENCE OF 10 MILLION VIEWERS.

They don’t call the guys at Muzo the music guys for nothing. The UK-based furniture company is bring Beth McCarthy from the UK to perform in its showroom during NeoCon from Sunday through Thursday. Muzo’s showroom is at 414 N. Orleans Street. McCarthy will also perform at the Muzo/Bellow Press party Sunday night (contact your Bellow Press friends for an invite). McCarthy was a finalist in the U.K.’s version of the voice and has appeared on prime time television in front of an audience of 10 million viewers. Though still a young talent, she has already been mentored by Kaiser Chief’s front man Ricky Wilson, completed two tours of the U.K., released a debut single and EP, taken on numerous festivals including Latitude and Green Man and played recognized support slots with bands such at The Orchestra (formerly known as E.L.O), Nizlopi and Shed Seven. Taking her influences from various different genre’s and artists, Beth’s style has been compared to that of Ellie Goulding and Ed Sheeran, only with a “little more edge and a lot more Yorkshire.”
INDUSTRY NEWS

The birth of Studio TK responds to the power of community and collaboration in the modern workplace, said Charlie Bell, president of Studio TK. “Office culture has become increasingly vital to a healthy work environment as it guides the way employees work, communicate and engage with each other. This trend became the catalyst to rebrand with a mission to specifically address the needs of today’s social office. New collections will be designed to empower choice, foster connections and build community.”

The company offers contemporary office furniture to the corporate, hospitality and academic markets. With an exclusive focus on social applications, Studio TK bridges the gap between where work is done and the cultures created. Partnering with architects and designers, the firm harnesses the power of social spaces in the workplace and their impact on work culture.

Studio TK is introducing a number of new and enhanced products to its Infinito, Cavu, Envita, Cover, Qui and Fractals collections at NeoCon, which is June 13-15 in Chicago. Influenced by the growing demand for social settings in the workplace, these collections offer architects and designers residentially inspired products that help bridge the gap between task-driven and culture-driven workspaces. Individuals can choose how, where and with whom they do their best work. From quiet focus to creative collaboration, the collections respond to the varied and diverse needs of the workplace, improving well-being and increasing productivity.

If there is one overriding theme for Steelcase and all its brands at NeoCon this year, it is engagement. The company hopes its new products — and there are a lot of them — will help employees be more engaged in the workplace.

The design directive toward engagement came, in part, from a major workplace survey the company completed which found 37 percent of workers are disengaged in the office. Just 34 percent say they are engaged. That's a major problem for a company that wants to squeeze as much productivity as possible out of its workforce because disengaged workers are generally unproductive workers.

Steelcase set about creating products to bring workers back into the fold. The company doesn’t have a single blockbuster product like it did with Brody last year, but it has many, many new products sure to make workers more engaged. “People are looking for something more meaningful from work,” said Chris Congdon, global director of research communications.

Other overarching themes from Steelcase include giving workers choice and control. There is a large scale rejection of anything that smacks of sameness, Congdon said. Steelcase designed a number of products for NeoCon that are highly customizable when it comes to fabrics, finishes, sizes and materials. The products follow what Steelcase calls “a rejection of formality.” That means the company is creating more products that feel homey and comfortable instead of the structured products it has been known for.

All of Steelcase’s new products are anchored in sound research, which has become a hallmark of the company and its designs. That research-based design philosophy has helped Steelcase stay ahead of the competition, especially when it comes to tech-enabled products. Its Room Wizard was years ahead of its time and media:scape created the category of the connected meeting.

From Turnstone to Steelcase to Coalesse, each of the companies’ brands are launching new products. Steelcase is also adding to its education and health care categories. It is a big NeoCon for Steelcase, certainly in terms of the number of new products it will launch. Here’s what visitors to Steelcase at the Merchandise Mart can expect.

• Turnstone

The Steelcase value brand is launching the Baseline table collection and Shortcut X Base chair. Both products fit well with the brand’s Bivi desk collection. Baseline tables share the same leg styling as Bivi. What makes Baseline unique is its ability to morph based on the demands of the designer. The product is parametric, meaning designers can pick the size of the table they want down to the inch. Designers can also choose from eight shapes, pick from nearly limitless materials and add custom printing on the surface.

“We are focused on the notion of the start-up culture,” said Turnstone General Manager Brian Shapland. “As we designed these products, we also looked at ‘intropreneurs’ — those workers who are entrepreneurial within a company.”

Shortcut X Base is a multiuse chair originally introduced a year ago. Turnstone is adding an X-shaped base and a number of new finishes. The Campfire Personal Table is getting a face-lift as the brand adds a number of new finishes and materials.

Smart and Connected Environments

Smart and Connected Environments is the umbrella for Steelcase’s tech-enabled products. Most of the advances are in the “connected” aspect, though a few are getting “smarter” as well.
Steelcase’s Brody — the all-in-one seat, miniworkstation product launched last year — is getting the Smart and Connected treatment. When a user sits in Brody, a red LED light glows, letting co-workers know the Brody is in use. When it is empty, a green LED glows letting workers know it is available. Brody also will get a heated lumbar option.

Steelcase Personal Assistant is an app that lets workers know at a glance whether a space in the office is being used or open. The information collected is valuable to Steelcase’s corporate clients. That’s where Steelcase Workplace Advisor comes in. Companies can collect information along the way — things like which areas of the office are in the most demand, which are least used and usage on different days and times.

• Ology Enhancements and Personal Console

  Ology is Steelcase’s smart, height-adjustable desk. The company is adding to Ology a high-resolution LED desktop display that can be used to control the height of the desk and remind users to stand and sit regularly. Controls for Ology are now top-mounted so users don’t have to reach under the desk to adjust them.

  Personal Console is a personal storage product that can be added onto any Steelcase height-adjustable or static desk. It mounts off the front of the desk and is designed to be an easily accessed storage container for personal products. It can fit a 15-inch laptop, a pair of gym shoes or other personal items. It includes USB charging and is Qi-enabled for wireless charging.
Users can type in a code to lock it, like a hotel safe.

Seating

Steelcase is bringing one of its successful European products to the North American market. The B-Free Lounge is a simple lounge product that has two different screens and simple cubes to sit on. The pieces all fit together with magnets, making it easy to configure.

Max-Stacker has been around for 40 years and is the company’s workforce stacking chair. This year, Steelcase is coming out with Max-Stacker III. It has a better feel to the plastic, more contemporary curves and 21 colors that match the company’s Node education chair, which often are used with Max-Stackers. Steelcase is adding two standard frame finishes and two “lux” coatings.

The Gesture chair is getting an update as the company offers the task chair with an integrated headrest. The company says it has twice the range of motion of any task chair headrest on the market.

Healthcare

Steelcase is taking a stab at redoing examination rooms, which haven’t changed much since the 1950s, with its Node with Share-Surface. The company is taking its Node chair — its standard in the education market — and adding a new surface that can rotate 360 degrees. This makes it easier for the clinician to share information on a laptop or tablet with the patient. Node is a natural in the health care segment because of its easy-to-clean shell and smaller arms that make it easy for the clinician to get in and out of the seat. It is meant to replace the old stool and clipboard in an examination room.

Coalesse

Coalesse, Steelcase’s high-end, high-design furniture collection, has a number of new products, including the Potrero415 tables, Massaud Conference Seating and the Montara650 Collection.

The theme at Coalesse revolves around the way its products can be personalized by the design community through color and pattern, materials and features, and shape and size to make it their own. Showroom visitors will be invited to participate in the design process through Coalesse’s new Customizer web app, which demonstrates ways of applying custom color and pattern to the LessThanFive chair.

Education

Steelcase’s core education products — Node, Verb, Brody and Thread — remain the core of the company’s educational offerings. Brody is gaining traction in common spaces, including major installations at the University of Arizona. The company is helping customers blend those products in a meaningful way. BoF
There is a very simple reason why Humanscale founder Bob King and designer Niels Diffrient became one of the most successful owner/furniture designer combos in industry history: They believed in the same thing — simplicity.

Backed by King and Humanscale, Diffrient designed some of the most successful office chairs in history. Chairs like Freedom, Liberty and World became synonymous with adaptable, comfortable seating. They also helped Humanscale grow from a small, regional ergonomics company to one of the most successful and fastest growing firms in the industry.

When Diffrient died three years ago just as NeoCon was about to start that year, it shook the company’s founder and its executives. Diffrient was part of the Humanscale family, and his designs formed the foundation of its success. What would happen to the company without him?

That question was easily answered: It would continue on the same path King and Diffrient forged. “What he believed in is the same thing we’ve always believed in,” King said. “Niels and I always believed simplicity was the key to great design. Both of us believed that if you make things very easy to use, they end... up being used. In an office environment, that means people move. People are not stuck in a fixed position.”

That simple premise continues to drive Humanscale forward as it notches year after year of sales growth (and makes the major office furniture makers very uncomfortable). That premise also continues to guide the company, even after Diffrient’s death.

“The furniture industry has given us products for 50 years that keep people dead still in the office,” King said. “It’s not healthy, and it’s not comfortable. Traditionally, a worker gets a desk that doesn’t move, a monitor that doesn’t move and a chair that is locked into place and never moves. There’s a lot of talk coming from other companies about how they are designing products that help. But talk is easy. The hard part is to actually do it.”

Though Diffrient has been gone for three years, his work continues to influence Humanscale. At NeoCon, Humanscale is launching the Diffrient Occasional chairs, a line of multipurpose, cantilever stacking chairs that come in three variations to complement the Smart, Liberty and Diffrient World task chairs.

Perhaps more importantly, Humanscale is showing prototype chairs that advance designs Diffrient was working on at the time of his death, including the much-anticipated follow-up to his classic Jefferson Chair, which was introduced by Sunar-Hauserman in 1984 as a lounge chair designed for work. Though it won’t use the Jefferson name, King said it will use Diffrient’s research and findings on how a reclined, lounge position is healthy and supremely ergonomic.

Diffrient started worked on his follow up to the Jefferson Chair in the early 2000s, King said. The design was finished before Diffrient died in 2013, but it took some time to execute it. It has taken Humanscale a few years to get the chair into production since it “was not straightforward,” King said. Other never-before-seen designs from Diffrient will be shown at NeoCon as well, including “a visually minimal chair” and one that comes in a heavy duty version designed for a user weighing up to 400 pounds that looks the same as the standard. The chair has an articulating back. As the user leans back, the upper part of the back rest moves forward for support.

“It is hard to explain how it feels in words, but it is remarkable,” King said. “It gives you tremendous support you can’t get without the articulating back.”

The simplicity mantra has other adherents as well — Diffrient and King are not the only ones to promote this type of design. And King has made a point to seek out designers who share the company’s vision. Todd Bracher is a good example. Bracher designed Humanscale’s Trea chair with the same eye toward simplicity.

“We all worship the god of function,” King said. “The function ends up driving everything, and it is something we don’t compromise on. The way something looks ultimately flows out of that function. If we manage that process well, you come out with something that is beautiful — beautiful in an honest way.”

That results in timeless products since Humanscale isn’t designing something that will look cool in Chicago in 2016. If the company follows its design philosophy, what it creates will be relevant everywhere and over time, King believes.

In addition to Diffrient Occasional chairs and the prototypes based on his designs, Humanscale also will show Trea, Corde 4 Textile — a four-way stretch fabric; Vessel — a new architectural lighting product designed by Bracher; QuickStand Lite — a product that transforms a fixed-height desk to height-adjustable; and its tech products, M/Connect, M/Power and Med-Link.

Though a few of Diffrient’s designs will be shown posthumously this year, other examples of his work are still in the product pipeline. Diffrient will continue to influence the industry for years to come.

Diffrient’s work, of course, will run out someday. There will be no prototypes or designs left. But King believes the principles he left behind will continue to guide the company. Other designers who share the same philosophy will be brought on to continue the work. It is a simple premise, but one that guides Humanscale to this day. BoF
When a company hits the ripe old age of 114, it might be easy to assume it is past its prime, old and tired. Nothing could be further from the truth when it comes to The Gunlocke Co., and recent trends in the office prove this company is more relevant than ever.

After years of sterile, white laminate and metals, workers want the warmth of wood. They also want the comfort of home in the office. Finally, the pendulum swing toward open offices has some workers seeking the comfort of private offices again. All of these trends work in favor of Gunlocke’s strengths.

Still, it isn’t enough to simply peddle traditional Gunlocke lines to a new generation of workers and expect they’ll eat it up. Workers want all those things, but they also want their furniture to reflect how they work. Private offices need to be flexible enough to host a small team meeting. Wood furniture must be contemporary and cool.

Gunlocke President Don Mead understands this, which has resulted in the overall pace of his company’s business to increase over the last five years. “Yes, they need a place for focused work, which leads to more demand for private offices, but those private offices need to be more flexible and accommodate more in the office,” he said.

Instead of focusing on the latest trends in the office, Gunlocke is keying in on helping its customers be more productive. For years, office designers and their corporate customers have put a premium on density and not productivity. While it might have saved money in the short term, it resulted in less-satisfied workers. Mead contends productivity is very expensive, perhaps more so than the density gains by stacking workers into offices.

Workplace trends matter, and the way they are lining up presents a huge opportunity for Gunlocke. The company always has been very strong in private office furniture. It is adapting its existing portfolio and adding new products to make the private office more flexible. Gunlocke has a distinct line of furniture designed around focused work.

“People have a strong tendency to oversteer when it comes to trends,” Mead said. “There was this quest for density and lower real estate costs — to shrink space. I think we oversteered in that direction. We are seeing the shift back. Workers want that right balance. They want portions of the office for collaborative work, and we are definitely seeing a little swing back to private offices for focused work.”

The “new” private office has to work a lot harder than it did in the past. It must accommodate small, casual meetings. It is usually smaller as well — 10 feet by 10 feet or even 8 feet by 10 feet.

“You don’t solve anything by adding more furniture in a space like that since you need it to be more flexible,” Mead said, noting... furniture makers must be more thoughtful in the design of a private office.

Luckily, there is less need for storage than there used to be, freeing up space. Still, the two or three furniture elements that fit into the new office must be able to do more in the limited space available.

Gunlocke is investing a lot more in the other major office trend today: furniture for the teaming, collaborative and casual office space. The company has emphasized new products that work together in those spaces.

At NeoCon, expect to see two areas emphasized: table and seating products that support collaborative work activity and a lot of materials and finishes. Materials are becoming more important as designers want to put their stamp on the office through different veneers and finishes.

“I think there was a trend toward more cool, playful colors. Now we are seeing warmer colors, some painted finishes and some other materials in the office like stone, Corian and glass tops and beautiful laminates,” Mead said.

Look for the company’s products to have a lighter scale and feel — an influence coming from Europe. Visitors to Gunlocke at NeoCon will see wood furniture used in different ways and scales.

If you were to visit the company at its rural New York home, you would find a blend of high-tech, advanced manufacturing and old world craftsmanship. Gunlocke is definitely embracing the latest manufacturing techniques, but isn’t afraid to use tried-and-true methods when they make sense.

So, yes, Gunlocke certainly embraces its history. But it also is willing to change with the times. That has brought good results.

“All the way around, it is going very well,” Mead said. “Pre-order activity is up.

“Still, competition is always fierce in this industry. Not only do we have to make good products, we have to serve our customers in the right way as well. How can we engage our customers from start to finish that takes the effort out for them? It is a constant battle, but we are committed to doing even better for our customers.” BoF
Leave it to German office furniture maker Wilkhahn to push engineering and manufacturing forward as the company 3-D prints stools in the Merchandise Mart. It will be the first time furniture will be manufactured at NeoCon in a showroom. This is no, one-off show gimmick, said Chief Executive Officer Simone Vingerhoets-Ziesmann. “Wilkhahn sees 3-D printing as a cost efficient and less time-consuming way to make furniture,” she said. “We definitely see a future in 3-D printing furniture.”

Wilkhahn will be printing its Presto chair using lignin, a biodegradable material. The environmentally friendly printing material is used to make Presto. The 3-D printer is specifically designed for the purpose and was made in Switzerland. “Presto is a product we’d like to get into the market,” Vingerhoets-Ziesmzn said. “This product lends itself to 3-D printing since it weighs about 11 or 12 pounds and can be carried home."

Vingerhoets-Ziesmann said Presto is an example of the “prosumption” movement where products are only made when demanded by the consumer. The consumer actually produces the products they want. That means there is no over-production or waste since every product made is created by the consumer who wants it. Some futurists believe prosumers will be able to go to a store and 3-D print what they need, or perhaps do the same at home with personal 3-D printers.

Wilkhahn sees 3-D printed furniture being made by furniture manufacturers since they have the design and production expertise needed. Presto withstands all the commercial tests for furniture up to 220 pounds. The stool will come in 150 possible combinations, two heights, five 3-D designs and several colors. “This is cutting-edge technology,” Vingerhoets-Ziesmann said. “We are going to be making custom stools in biodegradable materials right on site. It is a very efficient way of producing furniture.”

Wilkhahn expects to have a strong NeoCon this year, three years into its major push into the North American market. Vingerhoets-Ziesmann said the company has had more requests for meetings at NeoCon than any other year it has shown in Chicago. Themed “Dynamic Office at its Best,” the booth (7-3082C) will feature new additions to IN and ON “dynamic seating;” a new high-backed Ceno chair; a height-adjustable Graph chair; and Timetable, a dynamic conference table line being manufactured in the U.S. for the first time.

The stand will display both assembled products and components that demonstrate design down to the last detail. All the ranges were designed to encourage better health and productivity, stimulating both the bodies and minds of office workers. This philosophy is nothing new. It is one that has been practiced at Wilkhahn for decades, with a focus on engineering and new manufacturing methods and materials.

IN is the latest in seating from Wilkhahn, and is a compact descendant of the ON office chair. Its design and aesthetic are born from the body’s natural movement and promotes well-being in the workplace. By special request of the A&D community, the chair will be shown for the first time with a white, through-dyed seat shell and backrest frame, including the lumbar support, expanding the variety of color options.

The ON visitor chair will make its debut at NeoCon this year following the ON task chair’s Best of Competition award at NeoCon 2010. The new stackable version of the chair will be shown. It was the world’s first office chair created with patented 3-D technology that encourages forward, backwards, sideways and rotational movement to foster natural sitting positions and promote well-being in the workplace, according to the company.

Wilkhahn has added a model to its stackable, four-legged Ceno chair by Läufer & Keichel. One of its bestsellers, Ceno is designed for multipurpose conference or seminar spaces, or dining rooms at universities. The new addition features a backrest approximately 20 percent higher than the standard model. The higher backrest option also provides a way to distinguish between executive and non-executive level seating.

Wilkhahn also is showing a height-adjustable Graph conference chair. The latest version features precision-adjustable seat heights, providing members of the A&D community with additional conferencing options. Wilkhahn’s high-quality, high-value Timetable folding, mobile conference tables by Andreas Storiko are making a special debut at NeoCon. The trade show will feature tabletop models that have been made by Wilkhahn’s U.S. manufacturing partner and assembled locally. The local manufacturing underscores a move by Wilkhahn toward greater flexibility, speed and customer focus.

The company’s booth design is expected to be interesting. Wilkhahn is using swing plates from its IN chairs as “antlers” mounted on the wall.

Wilkhahn also is preparing for a few major introductions at Orgatec this fall. It won’t leave out its North American customers, but bring the German office furniture fair to them. The company is planning traditional Oktoberfest celebrations for its New York and Chicago showrooms that would include its Orgatec introductions. BoF
Vitra Continues to Pioneer the Development of Seminal Workplace Design Concepts at NeoCon 2016

Vitra will continue to pioneer the development of seminal workplace design concepts at NeoCon. Vitra will present an installation that depicts a vibrant, creative corporate culture. The company has collaborated with Lukas Scherrer, the Swiss-born industrial designer working in San Francisco, to synthesize Vitra’s diverse influences into a cosmopolitan meditation on the role of creativity in the workplace.

Development of creative capital will provide tomorrow’s companies with a significant competitive advantage. Investments in a creative workspace — the physical embodiment of a strong creative corporate culture — not only allow an organization to attract the next generation of highly sought-after talent, but also provide diverse spaces to support creative exchange in its many forms.

Additionally, as work shifts to third-place hospitality environments like coffee shops and co-working lounges, “coffee culture” becomes a significant driver in workplace design. By incorporating greenery and the Belleville family of chairs and bistro tables designed by Ronan and Erwan Bouroullec, the NeoCon showroom will feature a working cafe installation that draws on the lushness of a Parisian garden. Vitra’s transversal product portfolio is particularly well-suited to applications that blur the traditional distinctions of home, office and public spaces.

Moving beyond the well-trodden cliches of Silicon Valley tech-office designs depicted in popular culture, Vitra will present a crafted and evolved work environment using a palette of naturally derived linoleums, plywoods of different species, oriented strand board (OSB), greenery and sisal. Vitra’s Chicago showroom will draw from the mythic archetype of the American start-up
The garage, a type of entrepreneurial creative workspace where calculated risk-taking and fresh ideas result in the founding of world-changing companies and disruptive business models. With the integration of Transversal Elements — high-performance architectural products incorporated from the Vitra catalogue of shop-fitting systems — Vitra will present an adaptive Flex Office concept — one that enables D.I.Y. reconfiguration in response to scalability requirements and rapidly evolving business conditions.

Vitra maintains vibrant environments gain character through a mix of old and new, high and low, classic and contemporary. The Chicago showroom will present an eclectic layering of Vitra furniture objects and fixtures, with iconic classics by Jean Prouvé, Alvar Aalto, Eero Saarinen and Charles Eames layered among contemporary classics by Ronan and Erwan Bouroullec, Konstantin Grcic, Martin Van Severen and Antonio Citterio. Vitra’s NeoCon 2016 presentation will be using the Vitra Color and Material Library, newly developed by Hella Jongerius, Vitra’s Art Director for Colors and Materials.

Normally, I devote this column each week to your questions. This week, I received so many emails about NeoCon protocol I decided to combine them and supply my answers in this guide.

I got lots of emails from manufacturer’s reps excited about getting face time (real face time, not the phone kind) between pre-NeoCon sales meetings and being in the showroom with their bosses. There were questions from independent reps looking for new lines and tons of messages from architects and designers who are going to be in Chicago on behalf of their clients and firms. As you might expect, there were also questions from dealers and salespeople about meeting with clients and manufacturers. If I could only give one piece of advice, it would be this: Make the best impression possible, while keeping one eye open for that dream job.

I spend part of each of my month living in Chicago, taping the workplace segments I do for Steve Harvey’s hit NBC TV show where I am the resident workplace expert. I live in NYC, but I relish the one week a month I get to spend in Chicagoland. NeoCon is a particularly exciting time of year to be in Chicago — at least for me, anyway. If you follow my guide, it will be a great time for you, too.

Without further ado, here are my tips and why they are important:

Looking good

It seems so simple and obvious, but present yourself as best as possible. That means something more than just looking good — although that’s important, too. The things I’m talking about are making sure you give a firm handshake, and repeating both your first and last name to everyone you meet. You have a last name right? We are seeing lots of people at once, you want to be sure people remember you. Do not assume anyone remembers you.

Another huge help is your badge. Check it several times a day to be sure it is facing the right way, especially if you work for a manufacturer. Be sure the tag they give you is visible. I wish manufacturers would make the print size on those little badges larger so everyone could read them, but I’m not holding my breath.

Also, please no more denim shirts or uniforms. You make furniture! It’s not McDonald’s! One time I walked into Janus et Cie, and they had smocks on. I thought they were going to give me a prostate exam. Another prominent manufacturer had everyone wear blue denim shirts like a Jiffy Lube.

Dress for what you do. Present yourself well, and don’t forget to smile.

Staying put, cell phones and Starbucks

If you are a manufacturer’s rep, stay in your showroom for most of the day. Your customers will be in and out sporadically, and you should make sure to get as much face time with those in town from corporate. I hate walking in while you’re out chatting with your friend at the competitors, and so do your clients and bosses.

Stay off your cell phones and stop walking around the showroom with a Starbucks’ cup in your hand — you make the place look like a used car dealership. Don’t be talking about your hangover from last night. No one wants to hear it. Which reminds me, check your breath and have some mints on hand.

And, please, send me a picture of anyone you see chewing gum.

The shoe factor

Here’s a simple one for everyone: Polish your shoes. They have shoe shine people in the lobby — tip them generously. Airports and hotels do it, too, so no excuses. I will be looking!

Blah, blah, blah

One thing I know before I get to NeoCon is I will be bored with your small talk. Each year, over and over I hear: “Where are you staying?” It might be fun to judge someone by where they stay, but it gets old fast. I always tell people they look thinner, even though they rarely do. Everyone loves to hear that. And while we are on the topic of where you are staying, watch how the “dealers” always stay in the most expensive hotels.

Elevator etiquette

Do not overfill elevator cars. Related: Use deodorant and breath mints. Every time I get on an elevator, I put in a breath mint and double check my badge is facing with my name forward. I am my own brand and like to think of myself as a walking billboard. You should, too.

Let them see you wash up

Those of you who are not in the habit of washing your hands in the restroom — you know who you are — need to remember you have a name tag on, and your customers and bosses are watching you. Seems silly to have to say, but the stories I have heard about this subject have affected people’s jobs.

No job shopping

Unless you are unemployed, NeoCon is not the time to sneak around and be interviewing. Trust me, you will be overheard or caught. There are just too many people with too many connections walking around. It’s not worth it. If some company is too cheap to fly you in at another time for an interview, you do not want to be working for them anyway.

Models are a big miss

I am personally tired of the companies who hire professional models to lure people into their showroom. What’s the matter? Are your people too ugly or is your product? This is not a car show. That being said food, candy, popcorn, water and a charging station for my smartphone will get me there every time. Smartphone charging stations are being provided by the Mart this year in the lobby.

Walking and talking at the same time

Speaking of smartphones, no walking and talking on your cell phone. Look and act professional. You’re not a teenager. We are all listening, even when you think we are not. If you’re walking around, always have business cards. Have them in every pocket. If you want to find someone you only see once a year, be sure to find them. Sometimes you think you won’t be able to, but they’ll crop up somewhere.

Bonus tip: Careful on Tinder, Grindr and Match.com — social media in general, really. NeoCon is big, but the industry is small. I have heard about many people meeting and hooking up on these social media sites only to find out in the morning their new friend is someone from the same company they work for or a customer. It happens. You can wait three days.

Finally — enjoy the show and be sure to stop by and see me!

Navigating Digital Disruption

Part One

Netflix is one of the great stories of the transformation process that so many companies still need to consider for their own business models.

The stock chart below (from MarketWatch.com) shows a five-year history of their stock pricing, which includes a 7:1 split in mid-2015. This kind of valuation growth may, or may not, be appealing to you for your own business. If it is, then it can be helpful to consider the story behind this transformation, along with the principles that set the stage for it to occur.

In 2011, Netflix came to the strategic decision that its robust method of movie rental distribution no longer held critical strategic advantage. The board of directors approved the decision to change its distribution model from mailed rentals to digital rentals. Just 5 years later, this move seems so obvious. In 2011, the market viewed it as an obvious Waterloo. Stock prices lost 80% of their value over the idea of abandoning such a successful and profitable business model.

Everyone loves a business that throws off money, the cash cow that just keeps on generating great returns. The temptation, of course, is to stay the course and just keep fine tuning it to make it even better than the competition. New promotions, updated offerings, additional channels to leverage – all of these are what conventional wisdom promotes.

Conventional wisdom doesn’t build empires, it slowly diminishes and then kills them. Innovation and disruption build empires. Finding ways to leverage new technologies, whether the longbow used by the British in the Hundred Year’s War of the 14th century, or the cloud in 2016, is what builds businesses that can not only survive, but grow and thrive.

No matter your line of work, what was once a strength – indeed, perhaps even a corporate core competency – eventually becomes a weakness once disruption hits. It is inevitable. The real questions for us to consider are these:

- What technology(ies) will cause the disruption?
- When will they be available, and when will they be adopted?
- Will my business be the disruptor or the disruptee?

As a product manager for many years, it was clear that when it came to cannibalizing my product lines, either I could eat my own lunch, or someone else would. Time stands still for no product or service, only for the principles upon which your business is built. The WHY remains, but the WHAT and the HOW must constantly adapt and change.

Netflix reached the strategic conclusion that an emerging technology – digital distribution – would be far more responsive to customer needs and easier to leverage to take advantage of its other sizable and scalable resources, partnerships, and capabilities. So, they claimed the disruption, making it their own.

Not everyone reading this blog is responsible for strategic planning for a Fortune 500 company looking for what to do next. The principle of navigating digital disruption, though, is for every business leader and every manager looking for opportunities to create market advantage. As 6gates is focused on the marketing and sales functions and their effectiveness, navigating digital disruption is as important for your team and business as anything else you pay attention to. You may have to fly at 37,000 feet to see it, but it is critical nonetheless.

In the conclusion of this blog, scheduled to post next week, an outline for understanding and navigating digital disruption will be shared.

Much of the insight for the conclusion is based upon the work of Chris Bradley, Partner, McKinsey’s Strategic Practice, found in this video:

It's that time of year again when anybody who is anybody heads to Chicago for three days of fun, networking, education and furniture at NeoCon. This year the BoF staff has been on the ground early checking out the latest changes to this Midwestern meca.

While you won't find Al Copone, you can take a tour and see where he lived. If you're a first-time visitor to Chicago you should take an architecture tour on the Chicago river to learn about some of the last century's most important modern architecture.

Food of course is another attraction. Our suggestion is to forgo the usual chain restaurants and check out the hundreds of great places to dine (chicago.eater.com). And please don't try to get a reservation at Duck Duck Goat, we're already on the waiting list!

Things You Didn’t Know About Office Furniture Design

So much of what we do, from pens to staplers to notebooks and even furniture, has been around for 100 years or more, and there’s really no sense in reinventing it. So much of what we do (at Poppin) is about the broad family of products we design and not adding new bells and whistles every year. We are always trying to make a product distilled to its elemental idea so it rings true to itself. Guest column by Jeff Miller
Think you know everything about designing office furniture? Here are nine things you might not know.

MOST WHEELS DON'T NEED REINVENTION

So much of what we do, from pens to staplers to notebooks and even furniture, has been around for 100 years or more, and there’s really no sense in reinventing it. So much of what we do (at Poppin) is about the broad family of products we design and not adding new bells and whistles every year. We are always trying to make a product distilled to its elemental idea so it rings true to itself.

INVERSE COMPLEXITY

It is easy to heave on a lot of extraneous form and detail, but making things simple is actually more complex. We’ve found/discovered stripping away as much detail as possible to keep products streamlined to be an effective process for us.

THE WHOLE FAMILY MAKES THE RULES

You wouldn’t think a paper clip could be related to a notebook or to an office chair, but at Poppin, thinking like this really does matter. We consider everything we do related. The more products we develop, the more we have to go in terms of the legacy of those products, which can inform what we come up with next.
BEING SYSTEMATIC IS ENDEMIC

Because we have so many products across so many different categories, we have a problem similar to what someone like a Lego designer has to think about with products that are meant to fit together or are a part of an expanding system. Furniture wants to be systematic, and as we develop new systems, it can be a slippery slope to slide down to think one system should fit into another and so on. We are very aware of how we can do this with our product lines. However, it’s easy to start spending too much time developing systematic products that could be better spent developing singular product opportunities, which can still compliment evolving product lines.

THERE ARE SOME THINGS YOU CAN'T MAKE IN CHINA

Costly duties apply to shiny metal paper clips, paper with ruled lines and wooden pencils imported from China. The laws that regulate the production of these items were created to stop companies from driving competitors out of business. So, Poppin smartly wraps its paper clips in a colorful vinyl that allows the company to avoid unneeded regulatory costs. It’s a great example of using design to solve a non-obvious constraint.

EYES ARE THE PRIZE

At Poppin, we pay a lot of attention to color, but you might be surprised to learn how difficult it is to match colors for products like our staplers batch to batch — even if it’s from the same factory. It can be incredibly hard to do, so you have to make sure everyone is looking at the products with the same eyes, meaning — and especially if you’re manufacturing overseas — that each product team is using the same photo-spectrometer settings, the same lightbulbs in light boxes, etc. With all those details, it still comes down to someone's eyes and their ability to recognize when the color is inconsistent, even by the slightest margin.
IT’S HARD TO MAKE IT EASY
If you make contract furniture, you have many different ways of working with customers, going through dealers, pricing structures or components of assembly. It can be very confusing, especially for our target market of start-ups that may have never heard of Herman Miller or Steelcase and are used to dealing with CB2 and IKEA. So, we are designing our products to meet the IKEA consumer’s ease of purchase with the Herman Miller/Steelcase approach to quality BIFMA Standards and testing. We want to take away the construction aspect of IKEA and the high-end dealers’ pricing structure puzzle of contract furniture.

EVERYONE WANTS TO STAND UP ... BUT THEY REALLY DON’T
So much is in the news about standing up at work and how it’s better for your health, and it’s absolutely true. However, studies have shown that as people stand at work more, they’re still balancing it out with a need to sit. What’s more, people who buy these $2,000 adjustable desks love them for a few days and then don’t utilize them as much as they could be. Our idea is to make accessories that help people solve these sit/stand problems, but at a 10th or even 20th of the cost for a stand-up desk. Flexibility and versatility are the keys.

GLUE IS ALWAYS A STICKY SITUATION — IT’S ALL ABOUT THE DETAILS
We’ve had a number of “Glue-Gates” at Poppin, with sticky notes that didn’t stick and labels that didn’t peel off the way they were supposed to. These little problems became bigger problems because they weren’t given enough thought beforehand. But really, these examples are just indicative of the types of situations that can happen in any project. So often it’s the little, but essential things that cause hiccups or hamstrings in projects. As designers, that’s hard to get away from sometimes because we’re so preoccupied with the innovation or the novelty of the project we can forget to make sure all the supporting details are in place. BoF

Jeff Miller is Poppin’s vice president of design. He previously worked with companies such as Apple, Herman Miller, Samsung and Itoiki.
A classic theater experience includes a white-gloved hand taking your ticket, a plush velvet seat and the buttery smell of popcorn, and it’s the inspiration for Popcorn, the new textile from Pallas Textiles.

Popcorn is an extension of the Essentials Collection. It comes in bright, saturated colors with supporting neutrals and brings a fresh perspective to an iconic basket weave pattern. This multipurpose textile can be used as upholstery or in vertical elements such as panels, tackboards and screens. It adds a pop of color to spaces grounded in the past. The Essentials Collection is designed so a pop of color can be layered with a statement piece to create a foundation of upholsteries that will stand the test of time.
Arc-Com

Sherlock

Multicolored, textured, vibrant...a few words that can be used to describe Arc-Com’s newest product addition, pattern Sherlock.

Sherlock’s textural tweed look takes on added dimension through the use of a multicolored, twisted, viscose slub yarn that runs in both the warp and the weft directions. The horizontal and vertical sequence of colored yarn placement, gives this textile its unique character and extraordinary shade variation within each color way.

The sixteen bright hues for pattern Sherlock are rich and vivacious. Combinations of a primary yellow-orange-blue, a lush blue-green-turquoise, and a jewel toned garnet-purple-blue, are offered alongside a wonderful range of sophisticated greys, browns and lighter neutrals. Stocked with the Nanotex stain resistant finish, and tested to 150,000 double rubs, pattern Sherlock is certain to become a designer favorite!

2020 and Creative Office Pavilion Collaborate on New 2020 Boston Office

2020 announced the opening of their new Boston office. 2020 has worked with a long time customer, Creative Office Pavilion (COP), a Herman Miller dealer, who brought the new Boston office space to life.

As a leading provider of design software to interior designers in the commercial space, 2020 was in a unique position to collaborate with a customer to make our new office a fun and productive environment including spaces where natural collaboration and creativity can happen.

Thanks to 2020 Cap, 2020 and COP were able to collaborate rapidly to find the best design for the 2020 team and business, and with 2020 Visual Impression they were able to see exactly what the space (shown) would look like with realistic renderings.

“We were excited for the opportunity to work with one of our customers and experience our software from our user’s perspective,” stated Mark Goldstein, CEO, 2020. “Being able to visualize your space through high-quality renderings truly helps with the decision process when you have hundreds of pieces, fabrics, colors, etc., to choose from.”

2020 visited the impressive showroom of Creative Office Pavilion at their Boston waterfront location. After meeting to discuss requirements and, touring the showroom for ideas, designer Jackie Canapino was able to propose some concept designs. “Our clients are very visual people. They need to see the actual furniture they are considering purchasing in their actual space. 2020 Cap allows me to do just that,” stated Jackie.

“We are thrilled with our new space and even happier that we were able to collaborate with our customer using 2020 solutions to bring it to life,” commented Mark.

David Bowie Installation at Egan Visual NeoCon 2016 Exhibit

In harmony with Egan’s commitment to design inspiration, an iconic photograph of David Bowie by renowned photographer Greg Gorman will be part of the company’s installation for NeoCon 2016. The image is in keeping with Egan’s exhibit theme of “Colors.” Taken 30 years before the announcement of the Pantone Color of the year 2016, Rose Quartz and Serenity, the photograph feels avant-garde, just like Bowie himself. Besides his status as a musical icon, Bowie influenced the creative and fashion sphere for decades, leaving a creative legacy to culture and design that still resonates today.

The installation will be found on Egan Standing Rigging with EganINK in Suite 1079 at NeoCon 2016.

E&I Returns more Than $28 Million to Members in the Form of Rebates & Patronage; Membership Soars to More Than 3800

E&I Cooperative Services returned more than $25 million in rebates to members in 2015 and approved another $3.5 million to be returned in the form of patronage refunds, according to a report disclosed at the cooperative’s annual stockholders’ meeting.

- E&I’s other notable 2015 achievements include:
  - Member purchases exceeded $2.5 billion — nearly $200 million over last year
  - Members realized more than $200 million in savings by using E&I contracts
  - Members recaptured and redeployed thousands of RFP resource hours
  - Membership reached a record high — climbing to over 3,800 institutions
  - E&I’s consulting division partnered with Rosslyn Analytics, with a focus on providing members with a compelling analytics package.

“With an emphasis on cost management, we’ve accomplished a lot this past year to help our members respond to any challenges and achieve greater efficiencies,” said Tom Fitzgerald, CEO, E&I Cooperative Services. “We’ve also continued to expand our services and grow our knowledge, and look forward to building upon this growth in 2016.”

Neutral Posture Announces New Graded-in Upholstery Program

Neutral Posture, a women-owned small business furniture manufacturer, is offering a new graded-in upholstery program for seating and systems.

The program includes graded-in upholsteries from 10 of the top industry suppliers. Carnegie Fabrics, Designtex, Guilford of Maine, KnollTextiles, Luna Textiles, Maharam, Mayer Fabrics, Momentum, Stinson (formerly CF Stinson) and Victor Textiles.

Upholsteries are graded into the price list from grade 1-9 for seating and grade A-H for systems. Neutral Posture will continue to offer carded programs with Momentum and other suppliers as well as the COM program (grade 1). This new graded-in program is another step in embracing the design community and offering customers more choices in their purchasing experience.

The program is part of Neutral Posture’s new motto, “We’ve figured it out, so you don’t have to.” Rebecca Boenigk, CEO, said “This is all part of our goal to make it easier to do business with Neutral Posture because we love our customers.”

Practice Greenhealth Selects HDR for Champion for Change Award

HDR was recently honored with the Champion for Change Award, an environmental excellence award that recognizes a commitment to improving environmental performance.

The winners of this award have achieved success in greening their organizations, while also encouraging their health care clients to expand sustainable practices and improve their facilities’ environmental performance.

HDR and other top performers were honored at the Environmental Excellence Awards presentation in Dallas, Texas, in conjunction with CleanMed, the premier national conference for leaders of environmentally sustainable health care.

“Change of any kind requires participation and ownership at all levels,” says Colin Rohlfing, vice president and director of sustainable development. “HDR is proud to impact sustainable change not only within our own organization, but also within our clients’ organizations that have a direct impact on patient health and well-being.”

Practice Greenhealth environmental excellence award winners are hospitals, health care providers and organizations of the future, according to its website. A number of awards are given out each year by Practice Greenhealth to recognize creativity and commitment to excellence.

TECHNOLOGY, MANUFACTURER

Configura, Chief to partner for CET Designer Extension

Configura, maker of CET Designer software, today announced a collaboration agreement with Chief, a global manufacturer of mounts, racks and accessories for flat displays, monitors, projectors and other AV components. Configura will partner with the Minnesota-based company to develop a CET Designer Extension that incorporates Chief products into CET Designer. The first Chief product line will be the Kontour family of monitor mounts.

“We’ve experienced significant growth with office furniture dealers specifying Kontour products. Our attention has turned to: ‘How can we be a better partner for our dealers? How can we make specifying and selling Chief products even easier for design and sales teams?’ With this in mind, Configura’s CET Designer is the ideal solution,” Chief Business Development Manager David Albright said.

CET Designer helps manufacturers and their dealers and designers to more quickly bring products to the end customer; the technology simplifies the specification and ordering of products by providing a single software solution for the entire space-planning process.
“Chief products in CET Designer add to the growing diversity in the kinds of products found in our solution. It’s so much more than furniture now, with all kinds of products that enhance and complete the workspace,” Configura Business Development Manager Brooke Snow said.

For 35 years, Chief has been providing AV mounts and accessories for a variety of technologies. In addition to Kontour, product lines include the industry-leading Fusion family of mobile AV carts, flat-panel display mounts and other accessories that contribute to a modern workspace. The company plans to include Fusion and other award-winning Chief product lines in CET Designer in the future.

“We’re excited to provide CET Designer users with a new Extension that will offer a simple, user-friendly way to specify and sell Chief products,” Albright said. “Partnering with Configura will offer immense value to our dealers.”

E&I’S Competitive Solicitation Process Validated by NIGP

E&I Cooperative Services’ member-driven, competitive solicitation process has been reviewed and validated by the National Institute of Governmental Purchasing (NIGP) as being in compliance with public procurement standards used by public agencies across the United States.

NIGP evaluation of the cooperative’s competitive RFP process was based upon a number of criteria, including: analysis of procedures and implementation; comparison to the ABA Model Procurement Code; analysis of cooperative member relationships; review and analysis of management reports; review of generally accepted purchasing methods and a performance evaluation for efficiency and effectiveness.

The final report provided by NIGP found E&I’s staff to be highly dedicated, experienced and committed to helping members.

“NIGP validation of our solicitation methods is fundamental to our goal of increasing utilization of our competitive agreements,” said Gary D. Link, senior vice president of E&I Consulting Group & Contracts. “As we continue to expand our competitively awarded contract portfolio, each of our contracts will be benchmarked during the evaluation process to ensure that they are of the highest quality and that they deliver significant value to our members.”

Complex wall and panel systems are now simple to design and easy to sell.

Trendway has been in the business of creating beautiful spaces for more than 45 years. Its products can be found in 2020 Cap, 2020 Giza, 2020 Worksheet and 2020 Visual Impression catalogs. You can visit 2020 at NeoCon in booth #7-4122 to see Trendway products on display.
Herman Miller and naughtone form strategic partnership

Herman Miller and naughtone have announced the formation of a strategic partnership. This new relationship will enable both companies to leverage each other’s capabilities and expertise in product design and development, production, and distribution across the globe.

Naughtone’s complementary product offer enables Herman Miller to provide customers with a more complete furniture package to support its Living Office concept, further reflecting the way that offices are designed and planned today. By leveraging naughtone’s established upholstery expertise and production capability, Herman Miller will continue to expand its production and product development capabilities around the world.

Based in Harrogate, Yorkshire, naughtone has grown rapidly in the collaborative market, becoming known for high quality manufacturing as well as innovative products such as the Hush wingback chair, Trace table, and the Always chair range.

Inscape’s Benching, Systems, Storage and Walls Products Achieve level® 3 Certification

Inscape’s benching, system, storage and wall products have achieved level 3 certification, which is the highest product sustainability level of certification. Credits under this certification for recycled content, chemical content, FSC certification, GreenGuard certification, etc. can be applied to projects pursuing LEED certification.

Level is the first, fully transparent, multi-attribute furniture sustainability standard addressing material utilization, energy and atmosphere impacts, human and ecosystem health and social responsibility. “Achieving level 3 certification is a significant achievement for Inscape and reflects our commitment to sustainable practices,” said Mohammad Khodayari, compliance and environmental manager.

RT London to debut a new room solution, Evolve

RT London, in partnership with Gensler, will debut a defining new room solution designed and developed for the higher education housing market at NeoCon.

Evolve is an adaptive room solution for today’s university student who is tech savvy, focused on academic rigor and values social networks. Building on a multi-year Gensler research study, Evolve helps students balance their social and academic needs by providing adaptive, modular pieces that move with the individual student as their priorities shift throughout the semester.
“After several years of research into the current and future landscapes of the student living/learning experience, it’s clear there is great opportunity to provide living spaces that respond to the diverse and shifting needs of today’s students,” said Nathan Cool, an architect and furniture designer focusing on Gensler’s Education Practice Area. “The resulting furniture solution provides students with an incredibly customizable and ‘hackable’ room environment they can tailor to their own learning styles and social preferences.”

Steve Eldersveld, RT London’s president and chief operating officer, said the Gensler team looks at student environments on campus the same way RT London does. “Students are looking for solutions that support their tasks with elements that can be easily rearranged by the student,” he said. “In turn, the school wants to please the students with progressive, attractive settings that reflect well on their institution. After the initial meetings with Gensler, we understood how well our perspectives matched up. From that point, it’s been a rewarding experience to travel down the development path together.”

Steven Meier, Gensler principal and leader of Chicago’s Product Design Practice Area, said the collection “acknowledges the ways students today are learning, working and living. Having the ability to personalize and adapt the room to individual learning styles, diverse work postures and varied levels of privacy are the system’s most distinctive attributes.”

Evolve will be at the RT London NeoCon booth #7030 in Chicago.

CAREERS

Boner Named Education and Training Manager for Indiana Furniture

Kirby Boner has been promoted to education and training manager at Indiana Furniture. Boner has been with Indiana for more than 15 years, serving as regional manager, and has also conducted numerous dealer and representative training sessions at the company headquarters. In his new role, his training duties will be expanded to include providing competitive analyses, developing more field sales tools for representatives and enhancing company communications with the salesforce and in Jasper.

CAREERS

Streiner Named Eastern RM for Indiana Furniture

Indiana Furniture has promoted Patty Streiner to Eastern regional manager. Streiner joined Indiana Furniture in 2008 as the Northeast regional manager. Her territory was expanded in 2010 to include part of the Midwest and now will include the Southeast territory, as well as Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

“Indiana Furniture has been successful in attracting the best industry reps in recent years, and now I’m fortunate enough to work with all of them in the Eastern region,” Streiner said. “Combined with our internal support, which includes an increased focus on sales education and training through Kirby Boner, new product introductions and our solid distribution network, we’ve set the stage for strategic growth over the next five years and beyond.”
